Lady Toppers on trail to Texas

The Herald Mid-east Regional preview takes a look at the four teams trying to get into the NCAA's prestigious Final Four next weekend in Austin, Texas.

Thirteenth-ranked Tennessee, the team that won the Bowling Green Bank Invitational early this season, will open play against Mississippi at 7 p.m. tomorrow in Diddle Arena.

Although 14th ranked Western is tough in Diddle, if they beat top-ranked Texas at 9 tomorrow night, it would be a major upset — and the biggest win in Lady Topper history.

The championship will be played Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

Unlike the regular season, students will be charged to get into the NCAA tournament games. Student tickets are $4 for both sessions or $2 per session. Tickets are available in the Diddle Arena ticket office.

Western continues to take care of business

By DOUG GOTT

In the Lady Toppers coaches' office there is a sign that reads, "If you want to do it you'll find a way, if not you'll find an excuse."

This typifies the way Coach Paul Sanderford and his team has conducted their business this season — whether it's playing Slippery Rock or No. 1-ranked Texas, as they will do at 9 p.m. tomorrow night in the MidEast Regional in Diddle Arena.

"That's the way we've looked at things all season," Sanderford said. "Some of you people overlooked the most important thing the other day (in the win over Middle Tennessee), and that was that we won the basketball game. Too much was placed on the officiating."

"I've never blamed a loss on officiating. It's execution, talent and coaching that wins basketball games, not officiating."

And in the week's preparation for the clash with Texas, Sanderford has been more concerned with game plans than post-game alibis.

"They've got nine great athletes," Sanderford said. "They've got just as much talent as Old Dominion, but we're not going to change what we do for them. We've won 26 ball games this year, so we're not going to change."

In the first-round win over Middle Tennessee, Sanderford said he'd never felt more pressure for a game in his 12 years of coaching. After all, it was a chance to get the Lady Tops in the remaining "Sweet 16" and get much deserved recognition for his program.

It was also for a win that would propel Western into a game with a national power again. Four of Western's losses came to Old Dominion and Tennessee, and a win could prove that the Lady Tops are capable of beating the national powers.

But the pressure isn't on Sanderford. It's on Texas coach Jody Conradt, whose team must try to beat the Lady Tops on their home court.

Besides, Texas is supposed to win.

"The pressure's on Texas," Sanderford said. "We feel like we can play well."

And Conradt and her team definitely feel "that the heat is on."

"It's a dreaded situation," Conradt said in a USA Today article Tuesday. "We're playing someone on the road and playing on their home court. I'm as nervous as I can possibly be."

The key to the game should be the guard play of Clemette Haskins and Kami Thomas. Sanderford expects the Lady Longhorns to apply defensive pressure.

Top reserve guard Sheronda Jenkins is slowed by an ankle injury sustained in the Middle Tennessee game but will play.

Western's guards will have to control the tempo of the game, or Texas will show a running game not seen before in Diddle Arena. And Lillie Mason will have to muscle her way for 15-20 points to keep the Texas defense honest.

"They're a transition team," Sanderford said. "They run a lot more (than Old Dominion). They do a great job defensively. We're going to have to handle their pressure."

"We can't give them the run outs — the three-on-twos or the two-on-ones."

A good sign for the Lady Tops recently has been the play of senior forward Gina Brown. Brown has been the team's sixth man throughout the last half of the season — a first in her career. She came off the bench Sunday afternoon for a 24-point, seven-rebound effort.

Brown has played about 30 minutes a game since the Sun Belt Tournament.

"We've had different people pick us up all year," Sanderford said. "Gina's been playing real well lately."

"She's a starter even though she's not starting."

And for Brown and the other Lady Toppers, there's no other place they would rather play Texas than in Diddle Arena, where they have won 14 straight games.

Vols hope to end championship drought

By JEFF SCHNEIDER

The Tennessee Lady Volunteers have been led to the Final Four six of the last eight years by Coach Pat Head Summitt, but they've never reached the promised land.

Three times the Lady Vols have been runner-up, including last year when they lost to Cheryl Miller's Southern California team 72-61. Three times they've finished third.

But things haven't gone as well as Summitt would have liked this season as the 13th-ranked Lady Vols have been plagued with injuries. However, they have still managed a 22-9 record.

They continue to knock on the championship door.

"I think this is the first time in my career that my team has not thought about being a national contender," Summitt said. "Our goal at the beginning of the season was 18 games, so I guess we've reached it. I'm tickled right now."

But in order for the Lady Vols to reach the elite four again, they will have to defeat a tough University of Mississippi team out for revenge tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in the first game of the Midcast Regional.

On the road to winning the Southeastern Conference Championship, Tennessee defeated the then third-ranked Lady Rebels.

"I'm assured Tennessee isn't going to surprise Ole Miss this time," Summitt said.

Tennessee guard/forward Sheila Collins poured in a career-high 40 points during that game, and she is having a superb senior season averaging 18.1 points a game and nine rebounds.

And Collins is familiar with tournament pressure because she's been to the Final Four her first three years and to the finals twice.

"We don't need Collins to play an excellent game, but if she does, it will make it a lot easier," Summitt said.

Tennessee guard/forward Sheila Collins scored a career-high 40 points in an earlier game against Ole Miss. She averages 18.1 points and nine rebounds.

But Collins isn't the Lady Vols' only player. Eight others contribute and give Summitt a balanced attack.

Shelley Sexton is averaging eight points and two rebounds from her starting-guard position, and the Lady Vols also have three freshmen who make up the rest of the lineup.

Lisa Webb, who was the team's second-leading scorer and rebounder, went down with a knee injury during the Bowling Green Bank Invitational last fall, and Valerie Freeman, who also started, dislocated her knee Feb. 16.

And because of the injuries, Summitt had to insert freshmen Dawn Marsh, Karla Horton and Kathy Spinks into the lineup. Combined, they've added almost 16 points and 11 rebounds a game. Marsh also adds four assists a game.

"I wasn't sure how the team would be for a while, but we seem to be playing well now," Summitt said. "They haven't really played like freshmen."

The Lady Vols have played well enough to win their last 10 games, and they seem to be on a roll, Summitt said.

"I think the Midcast Region is a tough one," she said. "Western Kentucky is playing well, and Texas has an awesome team. So we have to play well to win it."

"When the team went down with some unfortunate injuries early, we all thought they would fold," said Tennessee Sports Information

Director Debby Jennings. "But we came together when we went to Old Dominion."

The Lady Vols not only came together at Old Dominion, but they snapped the Monarchs' 45-consecutive home-game winning streak.

"That's when I thought we had a chance," Summitt said.

Summitt's bench also gives her a chance to rest her starting players without losing any ground.

Jennifer Tuggle, Pam Marr, Cheryl Littlejohn and Sherry Bostic have given the Vols a lift by combining for 11.9 points and seven rebounds during the season.

"With all the adversity this team has faced throughout the season, I think they have played outstanding," Jennings said. "And Summitt has done an outstanding coaching job, considering she needs a rest."

Summitt coached the U.S. Women's Olympic team to a gold medal victory last summer. But unlike counterpart Bob Knight, who coached the men's Olympic team and has shown signs of burnout, Summitt has generally been unfazed, Jennings said.

"I think the only time that she has shown signs of burnout was when we lost to Kentucky," Jennings said. "I could really tell that she was tired. But she came out of it well, and I think that has a little to do with this team."

"I might have done a better job with this team if I didn't coach the Olympic team," Summitt said. "I guess you would have to ask my players. I'm not in any hurry to get the season over with."

"I think I've got about two more weeks left in me."

And if Summitt's energy holds out the next 10 days, Tennessee may have a shot at the NCAA Championship March 31 in Austin, Texas, but the Lady Vols still have to win the Midcast.

Ole Miss would like to get revenge for upset

By BRENT WOODS

It's a common confrontation. A smaller, quick perimeter-type team against a big, power team that relentlessly takes the ball inside.

That's the match up in the first round of the Mid-east Regional at 7 p.m. Friday in Diddle — Tennessee's quickness against Mississippi's power.

The teams clashed in the Southeastern Conference Tournament finals on the Lady Rebels' home court, and the Lady Volunteers came away with an eight-point upset over Ole Miss, which was then ranked third in the nation.

"The only thing I think we need to do differently this time is not foul them quite so much and make a few more free throws," said Coach Van Chancellor. "We aren't going to try to change our game plan at all."

The Lady Rebels finished with a 27-2 mark and are in their fourth straight NCAA Tournament.

Their only other loss came against highly-ranked Southeastern Louisiana.

"When you play them, (Tennessee) it's like you're playing more than a team — you're playing a tradition," he said. "They beat us by eight on our homecourt, and now we have to play them away from our place, so we know we're in for a fight."

Ole Miss has dominated most of its games this season, scoring 16.6 points and grabbing 10.6 more rebounds than its opponents.

But even if his squad gets past Tennessee, the next round won't be any easier, Chancellor said.

"There's no doubt in my mind that this is the toughest region in the country," he said. "Of course, you have Texas, and Western is really hard to beat on their home court."

The Lady Rebels' strength is the power play of 6-3 center Jennifer Gillom and 6-2 forward Eugenia Conner. Gillom is averaging 18.3 points and 7.2 rebounds a game.

Conner is averaging 14 points a game and is the team's leading rebounder with nine a contest.

"They are both big, strong girls, and we will definitely be trying to get the ball inside to them," Chancellor said. "That's what we've been doing all year."

The other forward, 5-11 Deborah Temple, is also averaging in double figures with 11.3 points and 6.4 rebounds a game.

Alisa Scott is scoring 8.9 points a game at one guard, and Myra Williams, 4.7.

Chancellor said the officiating of the game could be vital to his team because of its style of play.

"We are a physical team, and it's important for the officials to let us play," Chancellor said. "During the season, one game they would, and the next they wouldn't. We need to stay out of foul trouble."

Jennifer Gillom, the 6-3 Ole Miss center, is averaging 18.3 points and 7.2 rebounds a game.

Texas hopes to return to Austin and Final Four

By STEVE GIVAN

Jody Conradt had to laugh.

She couldn't help but laugh when asked yesterday whether she knew that the last No. 1-ranked team that faced the Lady Toppers in Diddle Arena left with a broken heart and a lesser ranking.

"You just had to remind me, didn't you," said the coach of the University of Texas Lady Longhorns.

Georgia, the last No. 1 team to play in Diddle Arena, fell to the Lady Toppers, 72-67, in December.

"Rankings don't mean anything this time of year because we're all even," Conradt said.

Texas has been ranked as the best team in America most of the season, and the Lady Longhorns are hoping to bull their way back to the Ervin Special Events Center in Austin next weekend for the big roundup in women's college basketball—the Final Four.

The Lady Longhorns dismantled Western Michigan, 84-62, in the opening round of the championships last weekend at Austin.

Conradt says she's pleased with the way her team is playing right now, but the idea of playing at Diddle Arena isn't something she relishes.

"We are playing well, but I know enough about Western Kentucky to be scared," she said.

"We really haven't been challenged lately, so I really don't know how good we are. I'm sure Western will give us all we can handle."

But make no mistake about it, Paul Sanderford and his Lady Toppers are the ones that will be challenged Friday night at 9, when they tip off for the right to advance to the Mideast Championship against either Tennessee or Mississippi.

"There's no question that they (Texas) have more talent than anyone in the country," Sanderford said.

Vanderbilt coach Phil Lee, who saw his Lady 'Dores get slammed by both Western and Texas, puts it this way: "Western has got Lillie Mason. If you can imagine three or four Lillie Mason's along with a Clemette Haskins, a Kami Thomas and a Sheronda Jenkins, then you can understand what Texas is like."

Hallowed be thy hoops.

Steve Small, assistant coach of the Lady Toppers, uses the Dave Roberts standard line to describe Western's first-round foe.

"They are bigger, faster and stronger, plus they are much deeper than Georgia. You have to remember Georgia had a player or two hurt and they really weren't playing their best ball."

Texas is 28-2, with its only losses coming at the hands of Old Dominion and Southern Cal.

The Texas starting lineup reads like a who's who in college basketball. And Conradt, in her ninth season as coach, is regarded by her peers as one of the best in the business.

Last year, when Texas went 32-2 before being upset in the NCAA tournament, Conradt was named coach of the year by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

Andrea Lloyd

She got the same honor in 1980.

In her nine seasons at Texas, her teams have won 288 games while only losing 48. This is the third straight season that the Lady Longhorns have been in the NCAA tournament and the second straight time the Associated Press has ranked them the team to beat going into the championships.

So what is Texas like? What do they do to win all those games?

They like to run and play pressure defense. And like the 14th-ranked Lady Toppers, they have excellent depth, allowing them to keep fresh troops in the game to make their man-to-man press effective.

"We press from the time we leave the locker room and like to get in a transition game," Conradt said. "I don't think it's any secret what we like to do."

Also like Western, Texas has several people scoring about the same, with nobody having any major league numbers.

Leading the scoring is 6-footer Fran Harris who puts in 15.5 per game. Harris was this year's Southwest Conference player of the year. She plays forward and is noted for her outside shooting.

"She's one player I'd rather have shooting from 20 feet instead of 10," Conradt said.

At the other forward, Andrea Lloyd, was a Street and Smith preseason first team All-American. A 6-2 sophomore, she averages 11.6 points, pulls down 8 boards and plays more like a guard than anything else.

Lloyd, who tried out for the Olympics last summer, is regarded by many as the best all-around player, and as Conradt puts it, "she can do it all."

At center is 5-11 junior Gay Hemphill. Seemingly short for a center, she hasn't been short on points this season, recording 14.7

per contest while converting 61 percent of her field goal attempts. This is her first year at Texas; she transferred from NAIA power Wayland Baptist where she earned All-American honors.

At point guard is Kamie Etheridge who was an alternate on last summer's Olympic team. She is the spiritual leader of the team, averaging seven points and seven assists a game. She is also a Wade Trophy candidate—the equivalent of the Heisman trophy in football.

The other starter, 6-2 Cara Priddy, is not listed as a guard, but as a center. She gets seven points and three boards a game.

On the Texas bench is freshman forward Yolanda Wimbish who is known as instant offense in Austin. She averages 10.4 in only 19 minutes per outing. She hits 54 percent from the field.

The Longhorns version of Sheronda Jenkins is Audrey Smith, a sister of Anette Smith; the Texas All-American that is out this year with a knee injury. Conradt calls Smith the quickest player on her team.

Conradt said her team will "have to play good and play our type of game. If we don't, it could be very difficult for us." As for Western, she says she knows that they like to play like her team.

Everyone is saying the pressure is on Texas to get back to Austin, but Conradt downplays it much like her ranking.

"Well, obviously we want to win and come back to Austin. But I can only worry about one game at a time."

Vandy coach predicts Texas

If there is such a thing as an objective opinion about the Western-Texas game, Vanderbilt coach Phil Lee should have one. His Lady Commodores were beaten soundly by both Western and Texas.

"If Western is going to win, one basic thing is going to have to happen," Lee said. "Western is going to have to be at the top of its game and Texas is going to have to be off of its."

"I just really believe Texas has better athletes and is a better defensive club. That's not to take anything away from Western because they have a fine ballclub, but Texas is just something else."

"But if anybody is going to beat Texas, I'd say it would be Western because they are playing at home, and that's a big advantage for them."

The coaches

Judy Conradt

Few women have stayed in the coaching profession as long as Texas' Jody Conradt. She has coached three Texas schools in 15 years — Sam Houston State 1969-73, UT-Arlington 1973-76 and the Longhorns from 1976.

She has been around the Southwest Conference for most of her life, being a native of Goldthwaite, Texas and a graduate of Baylor University.

After graduation, Conradt taught and coached in the Waco, Texas school system before returning to Baylor for graduate work in 1968.

She was named Converse/Women's Basketball Coaches Association's Coach of the Year in 1984, and coach of the year in the Southwest Conference in 1984.

Conradt has a career record of 377-109 and a 260-46 mark at Texas.

Paul Sanderford

Coach Paul Sanderford's basketball roots run as deep as his North Carolina heritage.

Sanderford was born in Durham, N.C. and lettered four times in baseball and basketball at Corinth-Holders High in Zebulon, N.C. He earned all-state honors in both sports his senior year.

From there he moved on to Louisburg College in North Carolina, where he was named a junior college all-american in baseball and repeated as an All-American at Methodist College in North Carolina.

He received a bachelor's degree in sociology from Methodist and later a master's degree in guidance and counseling from North Carolina State.

Pat Summitt

Like Texas' Jody Conradt, Tennessee head coach Pat Summitt has had a long career in coaching, leading the Lady Volunteers for the last 10 years.

In 1984, she was head coach of the gold-medal winning USA Women's Olympic basketball team. In international competition, her record is 63-4, to go with her record of 245-76 at UT.

At Tennessee, she has led the Lady Vols six times to the Final Four in the last eight years, but has not yet managed to win it all.

As a player, Summitt played for UT-Martin from 1970-74 and went straight to the head position after graduation. She also was the co-captain of the 1976 silver-medal winning Olympic team and was a member of the 1975 Pan American team, all while coaching the Lady Vols.

Van Chancellor

Lady Rebel coach Van Chancellor is another homegrown head coach that went on to make good at a state university.

Chancellor is a native of Louisville, Miss and a 1965 graduate of Mississippi State, with a Master's Degree in education. He and his wife, Betty, have two children, Johnny and Renee.

He came to Ole Miss from Harrison (Miss.) Central High School with a record of 156-24. In 1977, he was named Women's High School Coach of the Year by the Mississippi Coaches Association. He has a career record of 329-76 for 12 years of coaching the girls in Mississippi.

In his seven years at the helm of the Lady Rebels he has earned a career record of 145-52. Last season he guided Ole Miss to an AP final ranking of 10th, with a 24-6 record.
